Telephone Falls Returns!

Earlier today I took $185 of your Patreon money and blew it on a new batch of classic PLA vinyl stickers. I've been out of them for a month or so now, so it'll be nice to have them back so I can toss them into your care packages and other PLA things that I mail out.

These are super high quality vinyl stickers from stickerrobot.com, guaranteed to withstand rain and hurricane force winds. Not the cheap flimsy crappy stickers that I usually give you.

If you ever want a few extra vinyl stickers tossed into your care package, send me an email and let me know, and as long as I'm not having a really bad day, I will happily throw in some extras for you.

Your contributions for June came to, which finally pushed us over the "Create a new episode of Telephone Falls" milestone. So holy crap, Telephone Falls is officially back!

Even though I knew this day was approaching, I haven't done a single thing to prepare for a new episode and really have no idea what direction the new episode will take. I don't know if I'll continue to use my own horrible drawings or I'll try to get someone else to do it. Maybe I'll start releasing individual animated videos on the main PLA channel until enough good ones happen to complete an episode. Or maybe I'll just do the same thing I did last time and keep it completely secret until it's all finished. Who knows. The important thing is that it's happening!

Of course, this also means that the $600/month milestone was reached, which is to mob a talk radio station together. So be prepared to wake up super early one of these weekend mornings and frustrate a couple of small town radio station hosts!

Even though you all got Snow Plow Show stickers in the mail last month (the $400 milestone), I still don't consider that goal finished because I didn't like how the sticker turned out. I've got a user-submitted design on the way from the sticker printer people which you'll probably receive in the mail in August. I'm pretty sure this one will be awesome and I'll finally be able to place a large order of high quality stickers with this new design.

And I'm still working on that poster. The poster is taking forever and I think I'm in way over my head on this one and I'm tempted to give up and just do something else because you guys might not even like it once it's finished. But I won't. I'm going to keep at it until it's done, whether it sucks or not. I'm really hoping I can finish it up this month and so far I like how it's turning out.

The minute that poster is done, though, is when I'll start putting together things for the new episode of Telephone Falls and I'm sure we'll end up with at least a couple more episodes of it before I give up forever. It's hard to say when a new episode of Telephone Falls will be finished, but I think it's safe to say that it'll happen before the year ends.

A giant thank you goes out to everyone who's contributed to PLA these past few months. I'm still blown away that people love PLA enough to throw money at it like this. Remember, we're only at the very beginning of this crazy Patreon project, so great things are still to come.

Check out this amazing piece of art that was sent to me by Kris, who is the creator of The Bedfellows cartoon series on YouTube. My favorite part of it is how big it is and how much space I was able to take up with it on this back page so I didn't have to come up with as much material on here. Thanks, Kris!

Hey, kids! Did you know that your smart phone is actually capable of dialing phone numbers? What's a "phone number" you ask? A phone number is sort of like a direct IP address number that connects you to a website, but instead of seeing the web site on your phone's screen, you simply ignore the screen and put the phone up to your ear and you can hear the "web site" being spoken to you! This is how our ancestors communicated with each other before the interwebs revolution.

Anyway, what I'm getting at is that there are a lot of phone numbers out there that you can "dial" into. Numbers like 206-424-8422, which will connect you to PLA's telephone network interface line and numbers like the ones over there next to that ClownSec phone booth. Try it yourself!
