Support PCN!

For many years now, Madhouse has been providing a place for us weirdos to converge and do prank calls, and with the recent switch to Prank Call Nation, a few of us have been taking turns paying the bills at PCN.

Unlike PLA's Patreon, PCN's Patreon is not a get-rich-quick scheme. PCN plans to use the money mostly to pay for the various hosting expenses such as the website, IRC and Mixlr. Leftover money will likely go toward helping show hosts pay for Skype credits and other miscellaneous expenses. If you enjoy the things you hear on PCN, then it's a very worthy cause.

12 Shows!

I don't mean to brag, but I did twelve fucking shows in July. I remember during The Phone Show days, it felt like a chore sometimes just to do 4 per month and I often thought about scaling back to 2 or 3 per month. And when I was doing the PLA Radio podcast, getting 2 shows completed in a month seemed like a big deal. Now I'm up to 3 per week and it doesn't even seem like that much work.

You people supporting PLA are 100% to blame for the sudden increase in shows. The only thing keeping me from doing more shows is this pesky "job" thing that I do when I'm not doing shows. If this kind of support keeps up, I can easily keep ditching real life work and continue to do more shows each month. Who knows, maybe even 5 per week!

When I originally started the Patreon thing, I was reluctant to promise extra shows, because I was worried that I'd get burnt out on them and want to move on to something else. But I think it's safe to say that I'm enjoying the hell out of making these shows and I'm pretty sure I can keep up the momentum for awhile. I'm really enjoying the pre-recorded format and I hope you guys are too. Please be sure to yell at me if you're ever unhappy with how things are going. I don't know about you guys, but I'm still pretty excited about the things that will come out of all this support.

As always, thank you from the bottom of my blackened, soulless heart for helping to support my continued shenanigans. It seriously means a lot to me.

 Luv.
Brad

ELITE CACTUS SQUAD

This month I've set up a members-only section on phonelose.org. The main thing it provides right now is a high quality podcast audio feed for The Snow Plow Show. This feed may also include occasional exclusive shows, though I don't currently have any big plans for that.

To sign up for it, visit phonelose.org/cactus and you'll be prompted to register for an account. Then you'll be prompted to pay for an account. Don't pay! Just send me an email and let me know that you'd like access.

The payment option is an alternate way to support PLA. If you want to ditch Patreon and use this instead, then do it! You'll still get the same things that you get with Patreon, but you have the option of paying monthly, yearly, etc.

Here are a couple of pictures posted on the PLA Facebook group lately. The cactus above is from Rebecca. The baby to the right belongs to Ron and Valerie who claim that the baby will watch entire Snow Plow shows. Makes me want to add weird cartoon shit to the spinning tape thing.

Elite Cactus Squad ID Cards

In your care packages this month you should find your official Elite Cactus Squad member identification card, assuming your postman didn't steal it to use for himself. This card is good for many things. Most importantly, it will identify you as authorized personnel whenever you're visiting our headquarters in Roy, New Mexico.

This card will also get you a 10% discount on all domestic flights with Jetblue and discounts at over 10,000 participating restaurants around the globe! It doubles the coverage of your AAA membership and protects your skin from the sun's harmful rays.

This card gives you an extra $600 per month on your EBT account and will randomly deposit money into your bank account throughout the month, thanks to TheN's BotNet 2.0. The smartchip imbedded into the card should scramble most credit/debit card point-of-sale machines and fool them into thinking you paid.

Whenever you get pulled over while driving, instead of giving the officer your driver's license, just give him your PLA ID card and you'll immediately receive a heartfelt apology and be on your way.

If a security guard or other authority figure is chasing you or says something stupid like, "Sir, you can't go in there!" just hold up the ID and yell, "It's okay, I'm with the PLA!" and keep running.

I did my absolute best on each of your ID cards by stalking your Facebooks and G+ accounts to put your actual picture on the card, but a lot of you are too paranoid to have a Facebook or a G+ or don't trust me enough to make your photos visible to me. If I couldn't find a picture, I used a picture of a robot that Laugh Track Matt drew.

If you would like a replacement ID sent to you with a better photo or a different name, security clearance level, position, ID number, or some updated firmware on TheN's BotNet 2.0 smart chip that allows you to control cats, just let me know and I'll send you a new one. I'll even make extras for your spouse or your kids or your multiple personalities. You can email your request along with the photo you want used to rbcp@phonelossers.org and you'll receive your new card with your next PLA care package.

Thanks, Laugh Track Matt, for hopefully being okay with me using your artwork on the back of the card without your permission. If anyone wants to buy a t-shirt with that same cactus drawing from the back of the card, visit Matt's t-shirt store at laughtrackmatt.spreadshirt.com. There, that should keep Matt from suing me.
