The Mohave Desert Phone Booth

Back in the late 90’s, a guy posted a story on the interwebs about a phone booth out in the desert. He found the idea of the desert booth interesting enough to take a trip to see it, and to continuously call the phone booth’s number, hoping to speak to someone.

From there, the obsession grew, not only with the author of the story, but with kabillions of people on the internet too.

Recently the author has decided to turn the adventures of the Mohave phone booth into a book and there’s a Kickstarter campaign to make it happen. And personally, I want to see this book happen.

As of this writing, he still has over $1,000 to go before the goal is met. So get on Kickstarter and search for “Mohave phone booth” to become a part of the final chapter in the booth’s history. Search for the same thing on Google to read the entire story of the booth.

8 Shows!

It kind of sucks that the month following the issue where I bragged about 12 shows in a month, I end up doing just 8 shows in a month. But that happened. I blame my stupid corporate sabbatical. I thought I could at least keep up with the previous month while on the road, but all kinds of technical issues prevented it from happening. Yeah that’s it, it was the technical issues.

So now all I can hope for is that I’ll make up the difference in September. I probably won’t make it, but I’ll sure try. At least I’m doing more shows than I was 6 months ago, right?

You guys sure loved your PLA ID cards! A lot of Patreon members asked for more personalized versions of their ID or wanted cards for friends and family. And because you all posted your ID cards on Twitter and Facebook, a ton of other people wanted them too.

Over the past month I’ve created around 200 ID cards for all of you. I probably gave out an equal number of free IDs and paid IDs. And you people that paid way too much for your IDs are awesome. Thanks! The offer on ID cards still stands—if you want an extra one or a different name or picture or whatever, just let me know and I’ll send you a new one.

As always, thank you all for being so supportive with this silly PLA thing I’ve been doing and for continuing to enjoy the shows. It really means a lot and gosh darn it, I just love you all so much!

 Luv.
Brad

www.snowplowshow.com

Last month I thought to myself, “You know...I don’t make things confusing enough for the podcast listeners, so I’m going to set up a whole separate domain name for The Snow Plow Show podcast, even though I’ll keep everything on phonelose.org exactly the same.” And so I did.

So snowplowshow.com is a thing now. There is a separate RSS and iTunes feed there. The main reason for this is to separate the names “Phone Losers of America” and “Snow Plow Show” when people are searching for the podcast in iTunes and other podcast directories. Nothing will really change on phonelose.org, so you don’t really need to do anything. But if you want a fancy new SPS icon in your podcast app, you should switch over to the new one. Thanks for being confused with me!

Who do you think I'm are?

This drawing of Jalonta, using her iDuct Tape Mini was sent to me by Travis Vs. And holy crap, that looks amazing, Travis! Everyone should definitely go look at Travis' Instagram page, which is here:

Be sure to shower Travis with compliments and hopefully that'll fool him into making us even more things like this. If you don't know who Jalonta is, then you suck.

Lots of New T-shirts!

I forget how this started, but somebody submitted a cool design for PLA and I turned it into a t-shirt. Then someone else submitted another design and I turned that into a t-shirt. Then Jaahso sent me that weird-ass Snow Plow Show logo that I liked enough to use all over snowplow-show.com.

In the past month I've had 5 different designs sent to me, all of them awesome and most of them worked well as t-shirt or sticker designs. And that's where this month's sticker comes from! Robitussin designed the 7-Eleven / Cactus / PLA logo sticker which all Patreon contributors should see in their envelopes this month.

You can also buy that logo as a t-shirt, as well as most of the other logos that have been sent to me this past month. T-shirts are available here:

phonelose.spreadshirt.com

Thank you, Travis Vs and Jaahso and Robitussin and anonymous guy that made the MasterRoy graphic, for sending in your amazing artwork.

If anyone else out there wants to send in your own attempt at a t-shirt or a sticker design, please do!
